WEBSITE & FUNNEL AUDIT REPORT

Serenity Bloom Wellness

Women's Wellness Brand | Landing Page & Digital Funnel | March 2026

Prepared by: Digital Marketing Analyst

1. Executive Summary

This audit was conducted on the landing page of a UK-based women's wellness practitioner offering nervous system healing, sound therapy, and energy work. The brand targets women aged 35–55 seeking emotional reset and spiritual clarity.

The audit identified three core issues preventing the website from converting visitors into leads or clients: unclear user journey, absence of lead capture infrastructure, and competing offers without a clear hierarchy. A focused single-funnel approach was recommended to address all three.

2. Brand & Offer Overview

Item	Detail
Brand	Serenity Bloom Wellness (anonymised)
Location	United Kingdom
Target Audience	Women aged 35–55 experiencing burnout, emotional exhaustion, or spiritual disconnection
Offers Reviewed	Group healing programme (6-week), guided meditation series, 1:1 spiritual guidance sessions
Free Offer	10-minute guided meditation opt-in (nervous system reset)
Audit Scope	Landing page structure, user journey, offer clarity, CTA effectiveness, lead capture readiness

3. Audit Findings

FINDING 01 — Unclear User Journey & Decision Fatigue

The landing page presented three separate paid offers simultaneously — a 6-week live workshop, a £21 meditation series, and 1:1 sessions — with equal visual weight and no indication of which offer a visitor should choose first. This creates decision fatigue: when everything is equally prominent, visitors choose nothing.

Additionally, a nav link labelled "I'm a Practitioner" appeared in the top navigation, splitting the audience without a clear signal to general visitors that they are in the right place.

Impact

- High bounce risk — visitors leave without taking action
- No clear primary conversion path
- Brand positioning diluted across multiple entry points

FINDING 02 — No Lead Capture Infrastructure

The page included an opt-in form for a free meditation download with the copy "Join 500+ women who've already started their journey." However, at the time of audit, there was no functioning email list, welcome sequence, or nurture flow behind this form.

Without a backend email system, any leads captured through the opt-in form have no follow-up journey — making email marketing impossible to run effectively regardless of traffic volume.

Impact

- Opt-in form collecting leads with nowhere for them to go
- No ability to nurture cold leads toward a purchase decision
- Email marketing cannot launch until infrastructure is built first

FINDING 03 — CTA Overload & No Logical Flow

Five distinct calls-to-action appeared across the page: "Get Your Free Healing Meditation", "Explore the Journey", "Learn more" (workshop), "Get the series" (meditation), and "Book a call" (1:1). Each CTA pointed to a different destination with no sequential logic guiding the visitor.

A visitor arriving for the first time has no guidance on which step to take first — free resource, paid product, or consultation booking.

Impact

- Visitor attention is pulled in five directions simultaneously
- No single conversion goal for the page
- Reduces effectiveness of any paid traffic or organic discovery

FINDING 04 — Strong Brand Voice & Social Proof Present

Despite the structural issues, the brand has clear strengths to build on. The copywriting is emotionally resonant and well-targeted — phrases like "You've been holding everything together for everyone else" directly address the core pain point of the target audience.

The page also features four genuine client testimonials with named individuals and specific outcomes (confidence, emotional clarity, ancestral healing). This is strong social proof that can anchor a higher-converting funnel once the structure is fixed.

Strengths to Retain

- Emotionally resonant headline and body copy aligned to target audience pain points
- Four named testimonials with specific, credible transformation outcomes
- Free meditation offer is a strong low-friction entry point — well-suited as a lead magnet
- Aesthetic design is cohesive and appropriate for the wellness niche

4. Findings Summary

Finding	Severity	Primary Recommendation
Unclear user journey — 3 offers competing equally	High	Define one primary offer as the main funnel entry point
No email list or nurture sequence behind opt-in form	High	Build email infrastructure before launching marketing
CTA overload — 5 different CTAs with no logical sequence	Medium	Reduce to 2 CTAs: free opt-in → book a call
Practitioner nav link dilutes general audience focus	Low	Move to a separate page or footer link
Strong copy and testimonials underutilised	Opportunity	Position testimonials closer to primary CTA

5. Strategic Recommendations

01 Adopt a Single-Funnel Architecture

- Choose one primary offer as the funnel anchor — the 6-week group programme is the strongest candidate given its transformation depth and price point
- The free meditation download becomes the top-of-funnel lead magnet, not a secondary CTA
- The £21 meditation series becomes a soft-sell within the email nurture sequence — not a competing homepage offer
- 1:1 sessions remain available but are introduced after the prospect has been warmed through email

02 Build Email Infrastructure First

- Set up an email marketing platform (e.g. Mailchimp, Kit, or FloDesk) before running any traffic to the opt-in
- Create a welcome sequence of 4–5 emails: welcome + free resource delivery → story/credibility → pain point → offer introduction → CTA
- Only after the sequence is live should any promotion or paid traffic be considered
- Target: email list actively building by end of Week 2 once infrastructure is in place

03 Simplify the Page to Two CTAs

- Primary CTA (above the fold): "Get the Free Meditation" — drives opt-ins and list growth
- Secondary CTA (bottom of page): "Book a Discovery Call" — for visitors already ready to commit
- Remove or consolidate all other CTAs — "Explore the Journey", "Learn more", "Get the series" should not compete on the homepage
- Place the strongest testimonials directly above the primary CTA to reduce friction

6. Proposed 4-Week Action Roadmap

Week	Focus	Key Actions
Week 1	Website Restructure	Simplify homepage to single funnel path. Separate the Women's Programme and Meditation Series clearly. Reduce CTAs to two. Reposition testimonials near primary CTA.
Week 2	Email System Launch	Set up email platform. Build 4–5 email welcome + nurture sequence for the Women's Programme. Activate opt-in form with live backend. List starts building.
Week 3	Monitor & Optimise	Track opt-in rate, email open rate, and click-throughs. Adjust subject lines, CTAs, and send timing based on real performance data.
Week 4	Review & Month 2 Plan	Full performance review. Assess whether to build a separate funnel for practitioner courses. Deliver Month 2 strategy recommendations.
